Start with first circle of color in it's pure form
such as 100% yellow. Label
the top.

Water down the yellow to about 50% strength. The color should now be half as bright as the pure color. Make three more circles next to the first one and let them dry.

50% Yellow plus 50% Warm

50% Yellow plus 50% Cool

The first two circles will remain as they are.

After they have dried, choose a warm color such as Red, water it down 50% by mixing it on the palette and then paint it over the third circle.

Choose a cool color such as Blue, water it down 50% on the palette and then paint it over the last circle.

Orange

As before, wait until these have dried and paint a watered down (50%) warm color over the third circle and a watered down (50%) cool color on top of the last circle.

Continue on down your line of drawing inks until each color has four variations that will include:

• Pure color at 100%

• Same color mixed with water to about 50% strength

• 50% original color mixed with a warm color also watered down to 50% strength

• 50% original color mixed with a cool color also watered down to 50% strength
